What to ask so an offer can be judged properly

A discount is only meaningful against a quote for your own case, and the published advice explains why — plus what you are entitled to be told either way.

Why there is no standard price to discount from. The Victorian Department of Health: "Private dentists and dental practitioners set their own fees, which can vary depending on the practitioner and the type of treatment required." And for a given treatment: "Costs vary depending on the type of problem and the amount of treatment needed. Ask your dental practitioner for advice."

So an advertised figure, from anywhere, describes a type of case rather than yours.

What you should get before agreeing. "If there's a problem, your dentist will explain the treatment options and give you an estimate of the cost and the time it will take."

The questions the Department publishes. "What options are available and the pros and the cons of each option."; "What results can be reasonably expected."; "What costs, time and money, are involved and if payment options are available."; "Any possible side effects or complications."

"What results can be reasonably expected" is the one to use where an offer is attached to a cosmetic treatment, because it separates the intended outcome from the likely one.

And you are entitled to time. "If it is a simple procedure, it may be done on the day. If it is a complex procedure, you may need time to think about your options, or see specialists over multiple visits."

A time-limited offer and a complex treatment decision are two different clocks. The published advice is clear which one should set the pace.

The ongoing cost that no offer covers. Before any cosmetic treatment, the Department asks you to weigh "how much effort you would be prepared to put into looking after your teeth at home in the future", because "most cosmetic dental treatment requires extra care at home to prevent tooth decay, gum disease or other problems. Cleaning the area well and having a healthy diet is essential."

Health before appearance: the published order of operations

Where an offer involves cosmetic treatment, there is a published sequence that comes first. It is worth knowing because it can change what you end up choosing.

The rule. "Cosmetic dentistry procedures can improve the appearance of your teeth and your smile. But the first step is to make sure your teeth and mouth are in good health."

The four steps, in the Department's order. "Treat any disease first. Your health is the priority."; "Find out what is causing the unsatisfactory appearance of your teeth."; "Talk about the range of treatment options."; "Work out a realistic plan that suits you."

Why step two can change the answer. Finding the cause determines which treatments can work at all. For discolouration, for instance: "Tooth decay, fillings, crowns, bridges, veneers, false teeth and some types of discolouration do not whiten." A whitening offer is no use if the cause is a composite filling on a front tooth.

Not all options suit everyone. "There are many ways to change the appearance of your teeth or to replace missing teeth, although not all treatment options may be right for you."

And two decisions are irreversible, which no discount changes. On veneers: "It can be irreversible; once the tooth is cut for a veneer, it may always need a veneer." On crowns: "It is irreversible; once a tooth is cut for a crown, it will always need a crown."

For whitening specifically, three published limits. "Whitening is not permanent." It "commonly causes temporary tooth sensitivity". And "if the gel overflows, it can cause temporary gum irritation". The Australian Dental Association adds that whitening "should only be performed if the treatment can be justified, and after a comprehensive dental examination has been conducted by a Dental Practitioner", and that "only registered dental practitioners have the expertise to assess whether bleaching is safe for individual patients".

Its caution about consumer whitening marketing is worth carrying into any offer: such marketing "encourages unrealistic expectations about whitening results and promotes regular ongoing use to maintain desired effects. This is a concern given the lack of clinical data supporting frequent home use of such products over long periods."

And the funded routes that exist regardless of any offer. The Child Dental Benefits Schedule covers eligible children aged "0-17 years", and Victoria's public dental services cover concession and healthcare card holders aged 18 and over and their dependants, "all children aged 0-12 years", "all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people", and "all refugees and asylum seekers". The Department also notes costs can be offset if "you have dental insurance, which is offered under many private health insurance policies or as an insurance extra".

If something goes wrong with care you have paid for , there is a published avenue: "If people have concerns about the dental care they are receiving, they should contact the clinic which provided the care or the Health Complaints Commissioner."

Can I claim on the spot with my health fund?

Yes. HICAPS on-site claiming is available at Core Dental Glenferrie. Your own level of cover determines what you can claim, so check your policy limits before treatment.

Where do I find offers at our other clinics?

Offers vary by clinic and over time. We have run Invisalign open days at Caroline Springs, Carrum Downs, South Melbourne and Wyndham. Ask your clinic for current offers. Links to those pages are below.

Why is there no standard price for an offer to be discounted from?

Because fees are set per practice and per case. "Private dentists and dental practitioners set their own fees, which can vary depending on the practitioner and the type of treatment required", and "costs vary depending on the type of problem and the amount of treatment needed".

What should I be given before I agree to anything?

"If there's a problem, your dentist will explain the treatment options and give you an estimate of the cost and the time it will take."

What should I ask at the consultation?

"What options are available and the pros and the cons of each option."; "What results can be reasonably expected."; "What costs, time and money, are involved and if payment options are available."; "Any possible side effects or complications."

Do I have to decide before an offer closes?

The published advice sets the pace by the treatment, not the offer: "If it is a simple procedure, it may be done on the day. If it is a complex procedure, you may need time to think about your options, or see specialists over multiple visits."

What comes before cosmetic treatment?

Health. "The first step is to make sure your teeth and mouth are in good health", and the Department's order is to "treat any disease first. Your health is the priority."

Why does the cause of the appearance matter?

It determines what can work. For discolouration, "tooth decay, fillings, crowns, bridges, veneers, false teeth and some types of discolouration do not whiten".

Will every option be available to me?

No. "There are many ways to change the appearance of your teeth or to replace missing teeth, although not all treatment options may be right for you."

Which cosmetic decisions cannot be undone?

Two. "It can be irreversible; once the tooth is cut for a veneer, it may always need a veneer", and "it is irreversible; once a tooth is cut for a crown, it will always need a crown".

What are the limits on whitening?

"Whitening is not permanent", it "commonly causes temporary tooth sensitivity", and "if the gel overflows, it can cause temporary gum irritation". The Australian Dental Association adds that it "should only be performed if the treatment can be justified, and after a comprehensive dental examination has been conducted by a Dental Practitioner".

Should I be wary of whitening marketing generally?

The ADA raises a specific concern: such marketing "encourages unrealistic expectations about whitening results and promotes regular ongoing use to maintain desired effects. This is a concern given the lack of clinical data supporting frequent home use of such products over long periods."

Is there an ongoing commitment after cosmetic work?

Yes. "Most cosmetic dental treatment requires extra care at home to prevent tooth decay, gum disease or other problems. Cleaning the area well and having a healthy diet is essential."

What funded routes exist regardless of any offer?

The Child Dental Benefits Schedule for eligible children aged "0-17 years", and Victoria's public dental services for concession and healthcare card holders aged 18 and over and their dependants, "all children aged 0-12 years", "all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people", and "all refugees and asylum seekers". Costs may also be offset if "you have dental insurance".
