What does a dental hygienist and therapist do?

Dental hygienists and therapists are registered oral health practitioners. In general, their work centres on preventive care, such as professional cleaning, checking the health of your gums and teeth, and giving you advice you can use at home. Depending on training and scope of practice, therapists may also provide some other care within a plan agreed with a dentist. At Core Dental your dentist and hygienist plan together, so your care is coordinated. You can read more about dental hygiene at Core Dental and what to expect at a hygiene appointment .

How do you check a practitioner on the AHPRA register?

You can search the public register at ahpra.gov.au using the practitioner's name to confirm their registration. What can you ask before a hygiene appointment?

It helps to come with questions. You might ask:

what the appointment involves and how long it usually takes how often you should return for a clean and check, given your own gum and tooth health

what to use at home, including brushing and cleaning between your teeth (see brushing teeth the right way)

how your hygiene visit fits with your dentist's treatment plan

what the cost is and whether your private health cover applies, since we offer HICAPS on-site claiming
